"DISPOSABLE OUTERWEAR"

DECLARATION OF ROBERT B. TEPPERMAN UNDER 37 C.F.R. §1.132

Commissioner for Patents
P.O. Box 1450
Alexandria, VA 22313-1450

Dear Sir:

I, Robert B. Tepperman, declare as follows:

1. I am the President of Miller's Precision Enterprises, Inc. (hereafter "MPE"), and the sole inventor of the disposable outerwear disclosed and claimed in the present application (hereafter "Disposable Outerwear").
2. I participated in approximately 15 marathons between the years of 1978 and 1983, and have attended and/or been involved with many marathons from 1983 to the present.
3. Marathons typically begin in the early morning and end in the late afternoon, depending on the rate at which a marathon participant runs. Marathon participants experience a drastic range of temperatures during pre-race warm-ups and throughout the race. More particularly, temperatures are significantly cooler in the early morning than in the mid-afternoon and late afternoon.

4. Prior to my conception of the Disposable Outerwear, marathon participants had two major options for dealing with the cooler temperatures of the early morning and the changing temperatures throughout the race. The first option was to cut arm and head holes in a plastic garbage bag, wear the garbage bag during the cool early morning, then dispose of the garbage bag along the roadside sometime before or during the race when the marathon participant no longer required the garbage bag. The second option was to wear high quality athletic clothing, manufactured by athletic outfitters such as, for example Nike®, Adidas®, Puma®, etc., during the cool early morning, then either dispose of the high quality athletic clothing along the roadside or tie the high quality clothing around the participant's waist when the marathon participant no longer required the high quality athletic clothing. Each option has its negative aspects. Regarding the garbage bag option, the garbage bag is loose fitting around the arms and neck, thereby providing access points for precipitation. Also, the garbage bag is loose fitting around participant's body, thereby interfering with the participant's arms while running and inhibiting aerodynamics of the participant. Further, the garbage bag material is not breathable, thereby preventing the wicking of perspiration away from the marathon participant. Regarding the high quality athletic clothing, this clothing is relatively expensive and is a significant loss to the participant if the clothing is discarded sometime before or during the race. Also, the clothing can be a hindrance to the participant's performance if tied around his/her waist because the runner may need to re-tie the clothing several times, the clothing is loose and inhibits the participant's aerodynamics, and the clothing is relatively heavy.

5. Accordingly, I recognized a need to provide disposable outerwear for outdoor cool weather sports enthusiasts that is inexpensive, comfortable, disposable, and weather protective to solve at least the problems identified in paragraph no. 4.

6. Claims 12-31 are currently pending in the present application, with claims 12, 16, and 22 being independent claims. I submit that at least independent claims 12, 16, and 22 cover the Disposable Outerwear sold by MPE.

7. I submit that the Disposable Outerwear has been a commercial success in the market place. Since the introduction of the Disposable Outerwear in 2002, yearly sales of the Disposable Outerwear have been significant. Sales of the Disposable Outerwear are tracked through replenishment orders of the Disposable Outerwear. When Disposable Outerwear stocks run low, more product is ordered and the stocks are replenished. Accordingly, data presented herein establishing successful sales of the Disposable Outerwear will be presented in the form of purchase orders and the number of Disposable Outerwear units ordered.

8. Sales of the Disposable Outerwear have been particularly significant when looking at the number of units manufactured and ordered over the last three years. In 2005, approximately 25,556 units were manufactured and ordered. In 2006, approximately 17,640 units were manufactured and ordered. In 2007, approximately 19,080 units have been manufactured and ordered thus far with additional orders likely due to the remaining marathons in 2007. Reference is made to Exhibit A which includes purchase orders for 2005, Exhibit B which includes purchase orders for 2006, and Exhibit C which includes purchase orders for 2007. The "QTY" column of the purchase orders indicate the quantity of Disposable Outerwear units ordered.

9. The Disposable Outerwear is typically sold to about 10% to 15% of the registered participants at each marathon. For example, the Chicago Marathon has approximately 40,000 registered participants each year and 4000 to 6000 units are sold.

10. Marathon participants and other athletes desire the Disposable Outerwear because at least the problems presented in paragraph 4 existed and, prior to MPE's introduction of the Disposable Outerwear in 2002, no product was available in the market place to cure these problems. The introduction of the Disposable Outerwear in 2002 had instant success because it solved these problems. A competitor arose subsequent to our introduction in 2002. This competitor is the only known competitor and had and continues to have historical sales of about 100 units of disposable outerwear per marathon, which, using the Chicago Marathon example presented in paragraph no. 8, is only 0.25% of the 40,000 participants. Accordingly, if the disposable outerwear of the present invention is sold to between 10% and 15% of the participants and the competing disposable outerwear is sold to about 0.25%, then the Disposable Outerwear of the present invention represents between about 97.56% to 98.36% of the market share for disposable outerwear.

11. I submit that the commercial success of the Disposable Outerwear is attributable to the claimed subject matter of at least independent claims 12, 16, and 22, and that a nexus exists between the claimed subject matter and the evidence I submit herein to establish commercial success. For example, the commercial success can be attributable to the material and properties of the Disposable Outerwear, and the methods in which the Disposable Outerwear is used.

12. First, the Disposable Outerwear has been commercially successful because it is made of a material that is lightweight, strong, vapor-permeable, water resistant, puncture resistant, tear resistant, and abrasion resistant. This type of material provides many benefits to a marathon participant and other athletes, and is sufficiently cheap to enable a user to purchase the Disposable Outerwear and dispose of the Disposable Outerwear without forfeiting a considerable amount of money.

13. Secondly, the Disposable Outerwear has been commercially successful because it can be used for a sports or athletic event having a defined route, such as a marathon, and can be distributed to the participants, discarded in containers along the event route by the participants, and the discarded Disposable Outerwear can be collected and recycled. This method of using the disposable outerwear contributes to cost effective manufacturing of the Disposable Outerwear, which enables the Disposable Outerwear to be sold at a relatively low price, which enables a user to dispose of the Disposable Outerwear along the event route and not forfeit a considerable amount of money.

14. Thirdly, the Disposable Outerwear has been commercially successful because of a combination of structural features and the method in which it can be used. More particularly, the Disposable Outerwear includes a plurality of perforations disposed thereon for facilitating quick removal, the Disposable Outerwear is made of a material that is lightweight, strong, vapor-permeable, water resistant, puncture resistant, and abrasion resistant, and the Disposable Outerwear is provided to a participant of a sports or athletic activity, positioned on the participant, a portion of the Disposable Outerwear is removed from the participant during the activity by tearing the Disposable Outerwear along the perforations, and the removed portion of the Disposable Outerwear is disposed of. These features enable a user to quickly remove and dispose of the Disposable Outerwear, or a portion thereof, without substantially inhibiting their performance in the sports or athletic activity. Also, this type of material provides many benefits to a marathon competitor and is sufficiently cheap to enable a user to purchase the Disposable Outerwear at a relatively low price and dispose of the Disposable Outerwear without forfeiting a considerable amount of money.

15. The commercial success of the Disposable Outerwear of the present invention is not attributable to: A) promotion or advertising, B) shift in advertising, C) consumption by purchasers normally tied to Miller Precision Enterprises, Inc., or D) other business actions.

A) and B) Advertising was performed in connection with this product in the inaugural year of 2002. The advertising consisted of a flier set on top of a table at a sales booth from which the Disposable Outerwear was sold. A copy of the flier is filed herewith in Exhibit D. The flier was not used after 2002 and no other fliers or other forms of advertising were used after 2002. To bolster the contention that commercial success is not attributable to advertising or promotion, sales of the Disposable Outerwear remained strong and grew after the initial year of 2002 in the absence of the advertising.

C) The Disposable Outerwear is sold to marathon runners at marathons and to other athletic individuals desiring the Disposable Outerwear, and is the only product sold by MPE to such types of consumers. Prior to the Disposable Outerwear, marathon runners and other athletes were not consumers tied to MPE.

D) Other business actions have not contributed to the commercial success of the Disposable Outerwear. The Disposable Outerwear is sold in the following manner: a sales booth is rented for an athletic event such as a marathon, the Disposable Outerwear is set up and offered for purchase at the booth, and knowledge of the booth is attained either by the participants passing by the booth and seeing the booth for themselves, word of mouth from other participants, or from the participants previously purchasing the Disposable Outerwear at prior athletic events and seeking out the booth for our Disposable Outerwear.

16. For all the reasons presented herein, I believe the Disposable Outerwear claimed in the present application has attained commercial success, thereby making the claimed invention nonobvious in view of the prior art.

17. I hereby declare that all statements made herein of my own knowledge are true and that all statements made on information and belief are believed to be true; and further that these statements were made with the knowledge that willful false statements and the like so made are punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, under Section 1001 of Title 18 of the United States Code and that such willful false statements may jeopardize the validity of the application or any patent issued thereon.
